Translation Checklist for the Courts

	Review and prepare documents for translation	Yes	No	N/A
	Is the English language source file of high quality? Is the document in plain language and free of errors? Has the document been copyedited and properly formatted? Is the document consistent regarding termi no logy? Is the document culturally competent?
	Have all rule or legal citations been double-checked for accuracy?
2	Send out documents for translation
	Is the court working with a professional translator/translation provider? Is the translator certified by the American Translators Association? Are there clear instructions about the document? Have you shared the document's purpose and intended audience?
Z	Receive and review translations
3	Have you asked a bilingual staff person to review the translation? Is the translation grammatically correct with no typos/misspellings? Is the translation an accurate translation of the source file? Is the translation legally and substantively accurate? Does the translation meet the needs of the target audience?
	Finalize translated documents
4	Has the translated document been formatted and reviewed again in its final format? Has the translated document's readability been maintained? Has a bilingual proofreader done a final check on the translation?
E	Post and disseminate translated documents
3	Is the translation posted on the court's website?
	Is the translation accessible to other courts, justice partners, and community-based organizations? Has the translation been shared with LEP court users and the public?
6	Monitor existing translations, track updates needed, and identify additional materials for translation
	Is there a process for storing translations and original documents? Is there a process for tracking updates in a timely manner? Does the court ensure that minor updates are made by the translator? Does the court ensure that major updates are made by the translator? Are additional vital documents identified for translation
	<ul> <li>Are additional vital documents identified for translation</li> <li>→ as they are developed in English?</li> <li>→ as resources become available?</li> </ul>			